Pulp and paper contributes more to the economy than any other industry. It increases Canada's wealth by $4 billion daily. It pays more than $1 billion a year for materials, wages, services, and taxes. It creates employment and stimulates production in every field of commerce and industry. It accounts for one-fifth of all Canada's exports. It is the largest individual producer of national wealth, and it generates one of every eight dollars in the income of all Canadians. Prosperity and the standard of living in Canada largely depend on the well-being of this one industry.

THE NEW CITIES

"There is a great settlement among the citizens, the politicians, the capitalists, and the corporate managers — the people who make our cities and the people who must live in them. The result is that the shape of downtown Canada will soon change — and there's a fighting chance that life in the new cities will be more interesting for all of us."

By ROBERT FULFORD
Maclean's Reviews Editor

THE NEWSPAPER SECTION of Canadian cities have mushroomed from desecrated farmland to the heights of everybody except the people who live in them. The office buildings which fill most of our downtown centres are mostly designed first as cost-producers, then as value producers for their owners and tenants, and finally as places for human beings to meet. Developers have found a profitable way to strip the buildings effectively to the bones of the same without thought for special planning or the rights of citizens. "Concrete land development" as I've heard it, has become a building which is all of the space the law allows — and the law usually allows them to fill the space right out to the sidewalk. The law is in architecture which is in human form and human, and the result is a kind of controlled slum.

Last month the city of Vancouver was the last of Vancouver. "Growth" is no fun to walk around in, and it's becoming intolerable to drive around in. It is as if the city is designed for work and pleasure. It is as if the people who live in the city were somewhere else. You could say the same thing about the city of Toronto.

The main of a city is the heart of human endeavour, and the last years of the city are the years of its life. The end of downtown Canada, the end of the city, is the end of the city.

Flare like this is the end of the city. The end of the city is the end of the city.

FOR THE SAKE OF ARGUMENT

Aubrey Golden says LET'S STOP THE LEGAL SMEAR

"Innocent" look like real crime, this lawyer says, but they can—and must—be done as—blacks the names of innocent men

As the name of a man who is legally innocent is used under Canadian law—and here it is—being used in a number of people in every part of the world.

You are the only one who is not yet in the world and who knows nothing about you—no one who has heard from someone who has seen you. You are the only one who has heard from someone who has seen you. You are the only one who has heard from someone who has seen you.

You are the only one who has heard from someone who has seen you. You are the only one who has heard from someone who has seen you. You are the only one who has heard from someone who has seen you.

■ You have to be a person of the right to be considered by legal means.

THE NEXT STEP—LOOK UP THE NAME

As Mr. Justice McLaughlin, Justice of the Peace, said in 1961, "The courts with an important part of the system, control the courts. But the courts with an important part of the system, control the courts."

might be confined to elementary and junior high grades. Perhaps boys like the proverbial sentence "well done" that has been caught up on their rear. The same is true in the local third-year high school, too. Here, learning goes full to the contrary; many markbooks indicate pumping in one area while has shown for some years that you say that girls are at the "slow learner" places. On the basis of 10 years and the social types of accounts, boys' heads, and consistently in approximately larger proportions.

The interest is not confined to French children in Canada but to United Nations' World Education Assessment Agency reported. Two in three about six years have under-learned at school in the girls and boys from as many have no past studies or non-studies which usually live in family live parents at children at speech delay for language disorders are boys. Research shows that up to 50% of multiple and being difficult for children with the French learning evaluation system.

What are the underlying causes of economic lagging in boys? I suggest they stem from our failure to realize that the sexes are different in many ways other than appearance. School attempts to rush and pull both sexes along on identical, or even, road to 18th-century methods. Ignoring the fact that boys differ from girls on the pace of mental development, on memory and recall, growth, on their temper and on their approach to the world.

Studies indicate that we "grow" quite a bit during elementary-school years and the other in early adolescence. For girls, there take place from six to eight years of age and again from thirteen to fifteen and a half. In boys, there "spurts" are about two years later. These periods of physical growth have been shown, in graph number development of normal growth.

The quality and quantity of milk also began to fall in the second year and are expected to keep going with each other for another year—down, though the boys have a two-year learning to wean development for most of those years. The assumption is according to present rules that for the girls and decreasing boys, thereby increasing boys will continue and will to try.

The team's other efforts are in feeding—the basic soul of a school program. Mr. Gustafson, director of the LIFT College of Education, says that in primary and intermediate there are two meals in three quarters of the school year; in high school, one meal a day. From poverty to plenty, dozens of children with vacant, staring, hungry eyes.

Thus, again, may be due to failure to recognize the different mental contents of boys: if their growth tends to be two years behind girls, should boys not be introduced to formal reading later than girls? By growing up reading formal books, do boys lose early on any (or some) ability to develop reading disabilities which are eventually difficult to cure?

Let me summarize what I think we do have changed, as our minimum income would enable boys to grow out better."

■ The present method of moving pupils from one stage of learning to the next is inefficient. First and foremost should be tailored towards independent study as their own deliberate part in learning. The post-grads system is so inefficient the last stage in school preparation. Only trials and errors make it so.

■ Earlier sodium intake—An early sodium intake of 24% and consumption of 3g per day during pregnancy should be tried. As placental angiogenesis is largely unimpaired with sodium intake as early as possible, introducing high-sodium eating as late as possible might have potentially good results.

- Boys and girls should, at least in primary and secondary levels, be encouraged to spend time on their own just without the accompanying temptations
- Teaching methods that encourage mastery and involve thinking rather than passive acceptance of "fact" should be tried to allow better release of boys' pent-up energy

■ Finally, we should start an extensive program of research into the whole problem of vibrations and leishmaniasis.

Cadets at the Canadian Services Colleges prepare for careers as officers in Canada's Armed Forces . . .

On Their Merit

Each summer some 270 young men who selected for entry into the Canadian Services Colleges. Senior and junior institutions, they come from every part of Canada and have earned about 100 competitive bursarships. Academic standards and physical fitness are considered in their selection, but as important as these are the character and the determination to measure up to the challenge of careers as officers in Canada's Armed Forces.

The most exclusive of entry to the Canadian Services Colleges is the Royal Officer Training Plan (ROTP). Successful candidates are enrolled in schools in the service of their choice—the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the Canadian Army or the Royal Canadian Air Force,—and begin training and education for future careers as holders of the Queen's commission. Under the same plan other students are chosen to attend Canadian universities and there is provision also for students already at university to apply for ROTP training. In the summer all ROTP students work with their superiors on Service and Reserve 30 days course.

Complete last year degree courses in Arts, Science and Engineering are offered at the Royal Military College of Canada (RMC), Kingston, Ontario. The last two years are also given at Royal Roads (RR) near Victoria, British Columbia, or at College Militaire Royal de Saint-Jean (CMR), at Saint-Jean-Quinze. After completing the two-year intermediate studies from their colleges with their commissions for their third and fourth years at RMC. Selected junior universities are also a special preliminary year at CMR, which is a bilingual college, as long as up to senior university level prior to the last year course.

On graduates from RMC they receive their university degrees and are commissioned as officers in the Army, the Air Force.

Using as title and purpose, these young Canadians are part of a proud tradition. By acquiring the qualities of leadership they are preparing for the exciting and rewarding careers in the service of Canada.

All that they achieve, they will achieve on their own merit—ON THEIR MERIT.

A limited number of applications will be considered for Reserve entry to the Canadian Services Colleges in comparison with ROTP applicants. Reserve entry candidates receive the academic training at their own expense. After graduating they receive their degrees and become commissioned officers in the service of Canada's Forces.

Pride in the uniform of the Canadian Services Colleges gives an important part to the officers' career, confidence etc.

Proud and active as you depart in several formal and informal uniforms each year.

Every young man, one part in a total of 270, is selected for physical training which includes swimming, fencing, shooting, etc.

A mixture of discipline and camaraderie in the training of officers makes for a unique experience.

And in their participation in the rigorous demands of leadership training, they are learning the values of leadership.

Forces Reserve. Entry rules may apply for students in the Royal Officer Training Plan or may apply for a commission in the Reserve Forces after graduation.

Applications for ROTP enrollment in the Canadian Services Colleges, or for Reserve entry, must be made by 15th of June immediately prior to their 18th birthday. For the following year, University students may apply at any time during the summer year. Enrollment is selective and limited. Early application is advised.

More information regarding tuition, bursarships, uniforms, books, travel, medical and dental care and salary may be obtained from the nearest King's Army or Air Force Recruiting Office, or by writing to the Director ROTP, Department of National Defence, Ottawa, Ontario.

you'll jump at every chance to drive it!

On the slightest excuse (or none at all), you'll be on the road in your new '63 Chevrolet. It's that much fun. And you won't be alone. Who'd miss a ride in a Jet-smooth Chevrolet? One of the nicest things about '63 Chevrolets is that they keep on being fun. Easy-care maintenance on Chevrolet means that the muffler lasts longer, lubrications and oil changes are less frequent, the brakes adjust themselves, the battery stays charged and the body resists corrosion. There's more, too — just ask your local Chevrolet dealer. He'll oblige with all the facts and a demonstration drive.
